The Advantages of Microform

Despite the continually developing array of digital technologies—and sometimes because of it—information professionals at libraries and universities worldwide still rely on microform. They know it is an archival medium that will meet the needs of researchers for years to come. Microform provides many advantages including:

- New Viewer/Scanners - Images can now be easily sent to remote locations using microform viewer/scanners, which link to your computer workstations, letting you view and print articles or digitize and transmit them electronically (within Fair Use guidelines). This approach combines the unparalleled preservation and storage benefits of microform with the speed and ease of electronic access.
- Special Collections - Microform is the answer if you need hard-to-find or specialty resources. Many older newspapers and periodicals are available only in microform, and it gives your users access to complete page images from historical titles—often from the first issue forward.
- Space Savings - Microform lets you store an extensive collection of complete article images in a small amount of space. Microform takes up less than one-tenth the area of bound copies of newspapers and periodicals.
- Ownership - There is no upkeep or access fees. It uses stable, proven technology you already have, with no need for new workstations or continual software upgrades.
- Clarity and Accuracy - Microform is the answer if you need cover-to-cover clarity and accuracy. Full-image articles are essential to getting the full story.
- Complete Collection - Microform usually is the best solution if you need a complete collection fast. Maybe you're seeking accreditation or even rebuilding after a disaster. An extensive, customized collection of retrospective and current microform titles will meet the needs of your researchers quickly and efficiently.
- Support for Specialized Studies - A compact collection in microform will meet specialized research needs and still leave plenty of resources for the rest of your population. Many libraries also use microform as an added point of access for content that is most in demand.
- Durability - archived properly, it can last for generations, and there is no degradation of images.
- ProQuest Quality - ProQuest's microform images are taken directly from the original printed pages, so you always get the clarity of first-generation copies.

ProQuest Microform is the answer because we've been producing it since 1938. We not only exceed industry standards, we set them. Our microform products include thousands of newspapers and periodicals, and hundreds of research collections, many of which are not available from any other source.

Tsiang Diaries

1944 - 1965

Dr. Tingfu Fuller Tsiang (1895-1965), a scholar, educator and diplomat, started his political career as the Chinese ambassador to the Soviet Union in 1936. After February 1938 he served as director of the political department of the Executive Yuan. Tsiang was named China's permanent representative to the United Nations in 1947 and was ambassador to the United States from 1961 to 1965. He is perhaps best known for his appointment to the United Nations. While serving in this capacity, Tsiang campaigned for the right of the Chiang Kai'shek government, which governed only Taiwan and other islands off the coast of the mainland, to represent China at the United Nations. Dr. Tsiang wrote in a letter to The New York Times, "The Communist regime is un-Chinese in origin and un-Chinese in character and purpose. Morally, it cannot represent the Chinese people."

Although his position became increasingly difficult after the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China was established in 1949, Tsiang remained a well-respected figure throughout his diplomatic career. In addition to his unflagging support of Nationalist China, Tsiang advocated international recognition and autonomy for the peoples of Indonesia, Palestine, Czechoslovakia, Ceylon and others. He once said that "all people must make up their minds to respect the ideology of others...it is impossible to maintain that the world must accept one system." The collection contains the personal reflections of this political figure for the years encompassing his most active diplomatic work. The diaries are written in English and contain one-page entries for each day. The collection was filmed from volumes housed at Harvard University.

Livery Company Archives*

1428 - 1971

The Tacklehouse and Ticket Porters and the Comb-Makers minute books, accounts and other records, 1566-1895, is a collection shedding particular light on The Fellowship Porters, an organization with roots in the 13th century that retained sole rights to the handling of measurable commodities until the mid-19th century. Like most of the City Livery Companies, the origins of the Pewterers Company lie in the Middle Ages. During the 15th century, craftsmen began to exercise more control over their own trades. The Crown granted charters allowing craftsmen to form guilds that exercised extensive jurisdiction over all aspects of the trade. The Pewterers were granted a charter by Edward IV in 1474 and their records, extant from 1451, continue unbroken, embracing later charters, company ordinances, by-laws and records of members.

Powderly, Terence. The Terence Vincent Powderly Papers, 1864-1937; The John William Hayes Papers, 1880-1921

The 19th century's largest and most influential labor union, The Knights of Labor, was not trade-specific. It accomplished more for the cause of the American worker than any organization until the American Federation of Labor superseded its power in the early 20th century. The Knights of Labor crossed trades and united American workers on a national scale at a pivotal point in labor history. The Powderly and Hayes papers span the entire life of the Knights of Labor, allowing researchers to view this unique organization from the vantage point of two of its most important leaders. Students of labor law, history and political science will use this collection to assist them in studying the American labor movement through a period of hard times and a changing economic structure in this country. Among topics to be explored through the complementary personal histories in this collection are: the influence of Powderly and Hayes on the labor movement, the impact of these men on political, economic and social issues and major issues related to the labor movement, such as anarchism, women's rights, race relations, presidential politics, immigration, wages and hours and the closed shop.

Largely due to the charismatic leadership of Powderly and Hayes, the Knights of Labor comprised a tightly organized national network of Local Assemblies. It also was the first national labor organization to recruit women and blacks extensively and as a matter of policy. Researchers in African-American studies and women's studies will find this collection valuable as they trace the evolution of black and women's rights in relations to the labor movement. The Knights of Labor was also the largest organization of its day, with a peak membership of nearly one million. This number was not matched until 1902 when the American Federation of Labor came into its own. This collection also provides valuable information on the first comprehensive body of national employment information, which the Knights compiled and disseminated to its membership. Featured in the collection are correspondence, pamphlets relating to the Knights of Labor, speeches by Powderly and Hayes, reports on the meetings of various Local Assemblies, newspaper clippings, photographs, scrapbooks and legal files. Of special interest are numerous records pertaining specifically to the Knights of Labor and its organization, which provide essential material for a comprehensive study of labor and its history. Because the Powderly and Hayes papers reveal the inside, day-to-day story of the Knights, they complement in vital ways other collections about the labor movement and its leaders available to scholars.

Religion, Radicalism and Free Thought in Victorian and Edwardian Britain*

1833 - 1916

Religion was a central issue in the lives of many of the people in Britain in the 19th century and religious societies proliferated to express this concern and to reach out to the poor, who were felt not to be religious enough and to be in special need of its message. Charity, education, social policy and even politics were seen as having an important religious dimension. One consequence of this was that those radicals who dissented from the prevailing orthodoxies of their age felt obliged to attack the religious dimensions as well, often substituting for it their own belief systems and organizations.

Volume I, 1800 - 1899

Volume I of this collection, edited by Michelle Perrot, contains a vast amount of documentation on the economic and social conditions of working-class life in 19th century France. A special effort has been made to include varying viewpoints. While there are a number of ideological works in the collection, priority has been given to statistical and factual studies. These include official government reports and the private works of physicians, economists, statesmen and men of letters. A book by Michelle Perrot, Enquêtes sur la Condition Ouvrière du XIX^{ème} Siècle, accompanies the microfiche and includes full indexes to the collection, with descriptive text.

The French Industrial Revolution

1810 - 1870

Although modern historians prefer different appellations, what has been dubbed "The French Industrial Revolution" took place between 1810 and 1870. Technological innovations were introduced slowly and took hold gradually, but eventually resulted in dramatic changes in the means of production. In addition to the development of France's rail network and waterways, this period saw the flourishing of industrial exhibitions whose purpose was to acquaint the French public with the progress of the country and, more significantly, to serve notice to Britain that France was equal to any economic challenge. More than 50,000 pages of rare source materials make up this collection, divided into five sections: "Statistics": Descriptive Accounts of the French Industrial Economy, Towards a Rational Organization of Industry, French Industrial Exhibitions, Major Industrial Surveys and Railways and Waterways

The Saint-Simoniens

1825 - 1834

Aside from the great historical impact of Saint-Simonism as a political force, influencing a wide spectrum of ideological systems from the positivism of Comte to the socialism of Fourier and its pioneering role in the women's movement in France, the Saint-Simonist "religion" is a truly fascinating chapter in the great book of marvels of the 19th century. Pure mysticism at one moment, with its myth of a woman Messiah come from the East, pure comedy the next, with its aptly-named Father Enfantin at the helm, pure surrealism at others, in its impossible effort to canonize aspects of the Industrial Revolution, it makes spell-binding reading for scholars of all persuasions.

The Search for Utopia in the Age of Enlightenment

1677 - 1800

The rare utopian works in Volume I of this collection (edited by Albert Soboul) range in date from 1677 to the later days of the Napoleonic era, with the large majority falling in the 18th century. They are concerned with a wide range of subjects, including politics, economics, social questions, religion, the Church, education, marriage and roles of the sexes. Writers of diverse viewpoints and social backgrounds are represented and the format of the works varies from concrete proposals to fantastic voyages. In the writings it is possible to discern an ideological progression from enlightened despotism to limited monarchy to virtual anarchy. Some clear precursors of later socialist and communist ideas are also present.

The World Federalist Movement: A Collection of Mainstream Journals on Microfiche

1939 - 1951

The journals listed below were all connected with movements to establish European or world federation as a stronger form of international organization than the League of Nations or United Nations. Begun in the period between the wars, the movement gained new momentum during and after the tragedy of World War II and especially after the advent of atomic weapons, which made all humanity apprehensive about the future peace of the world. The underlying theory was that, to abolish war, it was both necessary and possible to go beyond a confederation of sovereign states to a federal world government of states and people. The hope was that the rule of law at the international level would inaugurate an era of ordered freedom under law.

These journals deal with the founding of the United Nations, proposals for U.N. reform, the international control of atomic energy, world federalism, Atlantic union, European union, NATO reform and the politics of the Cold War – all issues still fundamental to world peace in the 1990s. The journals are primary sources for the study of an historic new movement in the field of international organization. Conveniently collected here, they should be of interest to students and scholars of international relations, diplomacy, history, international organization, federalism and peace. This microfiche project was first suggested by the late Dr. Warren F. Kuehl, Professor of History at the University of Akron and Director of the Center for Peace Studies at Akron. The series is dedicated to his memory.

Model Cities Reports

In the 1960s, urban riots were spawned by a soaring crime rate, inadequate housing and education and high unemployment in America's inner cities. A startled nation was finally forced to take a close look at these pockets of poverty and the forgotten people within them. The Model Cities program was President Johnson's answer to this national problem as part of his domestic war on poverty, discrimination and inadequate housing. Institutions supporting programs today in socioeconomic development and planning, environmental planning, urban development, political science, sociology and other relevant fields can now access the multitude of documents generated during this program. Included are studies by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and by private consultants who analyzed the Model Cities program, plus a collection of demographic materials, studies and statistical charts on more than 250 U.S. communities. Johnson's unprecedented program sought to bring physical and social planning efforts together to meet complex human needs. Covering both aspects of this effort, the collection provides researchers with information on such key issues as:

- Transportation
- City planning
- Evaluation design
- Day care
- Community health services
- Recreational facilities
- Vocational rehabilitation
- Urban design
- Data management
- Residential rehabilitation
- Employment
- Programs for the elderly
- Crime and juvenile delinquency
- Drug abuse programs

Fashioned almost solely by Johnson, Model Cities is indicative of the Great Society's towering aspirations. This research collection shows Johnson's determination to transform ideas into effective solutions to counteract the deterioration of American cities. Model Cities Reports meets the research needs of scholars in many ways: Sociologists, political scientists, historians and anthropologists find an historical perspective on the planning approach to urban phenomena, data on population trends, retrospective studies of U.S. cities and the beginning of the "welfare state," which provide an unparalleled source of historical data. Human services practitioners and social workers discover extensive coverage on topics such as day care, unemployment, impact studies, the elderly and crime. Also, useful information on other groundbreaking social programs of the Great Society Period is provided. Urban planners, city managers, public works officials access essential facts and statistics concerning the laws, agencies, grants and regulations affecting urban planning, plus information on transportation, pollution and many other issues. Model Cities Reports was filmed from the archives at the Library of the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington, D.C. It stands as a historic example of Johnson's political effectiveness in dissolving the traditional deadlock between the executive and legislative branches of government to resolve an enormous and immediate national crisis.

Oneida Community: Books, Pamphlets and Serials

1834 - 1972

During the 1800s, a surprising 60 to 70 communes sprang up in America. Most were insignificant and soon disbanded, but a few, like the Oneida Community, were successful in sustaining their experiments over a period of years. And those that flourished – often due in large part to the strength of their charismatic leaders and founders – left behind a record of their activities for today's researchers. The Oneida Community and its founder, John Humphrey Noyes, bequeathed a rich legacy of materials for students in religion, sociology and American intellectual thought. The books, pamphlets and serials in this microfilm collection provide information on the philosophies, beliefs and practices that made Noyes and his community both successful and controversial in their day. Topics include: Bible communism, scientific propagation, Christian perfectionism and complex marriage. Founded in 1841 by Noyes, the group began as one of the most revolutionary ventures in communal life during its day.

While Oneida reached a population of only 300 during its prime, the community prospered despite legal and religious opposition engendered by its liberal sexual practices. Its successful manufacturing enterprises included making traps, silk thread and carpet, plus its still-famous silverware. The practices and principles of this community formed the basis for many modern communes. Divided into two sections, the collection features 60 books and pamphlets including works by Noyes on American socialism and male continence. The serials section contains publications by the Oneida Community, including The Perfectionist, Circular and the Daily Journal of Oneida Community. Students in religious studies can explore the non-conformist doctrines of the group and compare them with other groups of both the 19th and 20th centuries. Sociologists find insights into Noyes's theory behind family structure and can analyze differences between theory and the practical results in a human community. Historians discover valuable information on the social and intellectual climate of the 19th century through these documents. With the decline of Noyes's health came the decline of the community and by 1881 it dispersed. Yet, the Oneida Community left behind a permanent record of its ideals and philosophy that continue to have an impact on today's communal experiments in the U.S.

Browder, Earl. The Earl Browder Papers

1891 - 1975

Most scholarly research on American communism and the Communist Party of the United States of America (CPUSA) has focused on the McCarthy era and the Cold War – reactions to Communism untempered by the internal perspectives of the CPUSA itself. The Earl Browder Papers offers in one unique microfilm collection a large portion of that missing research link and provides perhaps the closest thing to party archives in existence. The papers included will be of major interest to any institution supporting programs in political science, sociology, legal and labor history, economics, or American history. Earl Browder's place in history as General Secretary of the Communist Party of the United States of America from 1929-1944 corresponds precisely to that time when the party had its greatest impact on American politics and labor. The arrangement of the collection into the six segments listed below facilitates objective scholarly studies of the party, offering a detailed chronicle of party activities and programs encompassing party leaders, sympathizers and critics. Contents of the Collection:

- Series I – Correspondence, 1891-1960: This section contains: correspondence within the party; family correspondence that crosses lines with Browder's political activities, such as the material involving the U.S. Government's attempt to deport Browder's wife, Raissa; letters between Browder and his family while he was in prison on passport violation, a conviction from which President Roosevelt pardoned him in 1941; and correspondence from many radical leaders of the day, as well as from organizations such as the American Civil Liberties Union and the United Labor Council of America.
- Series II – Subject Files, 1904-1960: Concentrates heavily on the workings of the Communist Party and Browder's role in it. Included are minutes, reports, financial data and legal matters pertaining to the party, both in the United States and other countries.
- Series III – Manuscripts, 1924-1967: Includes many of Browder's published lectures, speeches, articles, pamphlets and books. Also featured are unpublished manuscripts, news releases and Browder's reports to the National Committee and National Convention of the Communist Party.
- Series IV – Photographs, 1901-1941: Included are 53 photographs of Browder, his family and friends and various prominent American Communists such as James W. Ford, William Z. Foster and Ella Reeve Bloor.
- Series V – Legal Files, 1938-1958: Contains correspondence, reports, depositions, testimonies, transcripts of court proceedings, briefs and other papers pertaining to various court cases involving Browder.
- Series VI – Published Materials, 1921-1975: This section features Communist periodicals and bulletins, proceedings of the National Convention of the Communist Party of the United States of America from 1921 to 1972 and over 400 pamphlets. Without this body of documents, it would be impossible to objectively assess the Communist Party's impact on the political, economic and social history of our country.

Bulletins and Other Ephemera Relating to the Fourth International*

1930 - 1940

The stormy decade commencing in 1930 witnessed the efforts of the International Left Opposition to become reintegrated in the Third International. However, when the Third International failed to prevent the fascists from coming to power in Germany, the International Left Opposition decided to change course and directed its efforts into the founding of a new Fourth International, the inaugural conference of which was held in 1938. This microfilm collection is reproduced from material in a private source and represents what must be one of the most complete collections of surviving ephemera relating to the Fourth International. It is filmed chronologically and grouped by language.

Communist Pamphlets

1907 - 1982

Like most radical political groups, the Communist Party of the United States relied heavily of pamphlets both to educate members about its policies and to present its views to the general public. The Party and its front organizations issued thousands of pamphlets on every conceivable topic ranging from Communist relations with the church and interpretations of American history to transcripts of meeting of the Communist International and accounts of what a Soviet America would look like. Some pamphlets were produced to rally activists for a particular protest demonstration; others contained important theoretical pronouncements from Soviet leaders. The Labadie Collection contains a remarkably rich and varied selection of Communist pamphlets now reproduced on microfiche, making available to all scholars of radical political movements an invaluable primary research resource.

Debs, Eugene V. The Papers of Eugene V. Debs

1834 - 1945

Eugene Victor Debs assumed many roles in his lifetime and he exerted considerable influence on American political and economic life. He is most noted, however, for his leadership of the Socialist Party in America. Researchers can now access previously unobtainable material on the charismatic Debs through this microfilm collection. Topics for exploration and study through his correspondence, speeches and writings include: Debs' impacts on the American labor movement as leader and organizer of the American Railway Union (ARU), his emergence as the most significant figure in the socialist movement, his refusal subsequently to espouse pure Party doctrine and his disdain of the Socialist Party's machinery, his unprecedented five bids for the presidency and the impact his campaigns had on popularizing such issues as Women's Suffrage and the abolition of child labor, his imprisonment for violating a court injunction during the ARU's Pullman Strike and his conviction for violating the wartime Espionage Act during World War I and his subsequent pardon by President Harding.

The collection is organized internally into three sections. The first section includes previously unpublished letters to and from Debs. Among the many correspondents from both the socialist and labor fields and the country's literary and political circles are Samuel Gompers, Emma Goldman, Terence Vincent Powderly, Upton Sinclair, Helen Keller and Carl Sandburg. The second section comprises copies of Debs' editorials, speeches and other published materials, along with newspaper articles and government reports about Debs. These previously unpublished eyewitness reports on Debs by government agents were only recently obtained through the Freedom of Information Act. The largest segment of the microfilm collected by Debs and his brother. This material, when added to the rest of the collection, provides a wide range of research resources on Debs' life and on labor and radicalism in America

French Socialist Congresses

1876 - 1914

Historians of the workers' movement and of socialism, regardless of their ideological and methodological orientation, are in complete agreement on one point: the accounts of the congresses of the socialist parties represent a major and indispensable mine of information. The debates and deliberations of leaders at the congresses provide an excellent overview of the convoluted developments of the movement and permit an in-depth analysis of the collective mentality of the history of the socialist movement and of the social and political history of the period. This collection contains the documents of all of the socialist congresses from the first workers' congress in Paris in 1876 to the second session of the Eleventh National Congress of the SFIO just two weeks before the outbreak of World War I.

German Nationalism, National Socialism and Postwar Reconstruction (NSDAP)

1918 - 1949

This important microfiche collection contains more than 1,400 titles published from 1918 to 1949 by various National Socialist German Workers' Party (NSDAP) organizations and their precursors, as well as by publishers sympathetic to the Nazi party and regime. The materials depict the political and social crises that led to the rise of National Socialism in Germany as they were expressed in everyday contemporary society. The materials range from administrative reports of the Third Reich to mass-market propaganda in the form of pamphlets, popular magazines and booklets. Among the dozens of topics covered by this wide array of material are the establishment of Nazi organs, the implementation of pre-Weimar Nazi policy and the postwar dismantling of the party organizations. This resource also contains publications and documents that were produced by anti-Nazi organizations or commentators who opposed Nazism both during and after the collapse of the Third Reich.

After World War II, possession of such material in Germany and former occupied territories by ordinary citizens came to be incriminating evidence of Nazi sympathies and much material of this nature was destroyed as a result. Consequently, the material in the present collection is rarely held by research libraries and is difficult to obtain for scholarly purposes. Approximately twenty percent of the publications preserved in the collection are the only copies known to exist; the remainder exist in extremely limited numbers and are found in only a handful of institutions in Europe and North America. Though much of the content—and even the existence of these materials—may be deemed offensive, the collection forms an important historical record and constitutes a surprisingly complete body of documentary evidence of the propaganda, financial, political and social apparatus behind the Nazi regime. The publications, which are in excellent and legible condition, have been stored under special restricted access and have been circulated sparingly to readers as part of an uncataloged backlog for over 50 years. The fiche collection is organized topically with an introduction to each section provided in the Printed Guide by James H. Spohrer, Librarian for the Germanic Collections, Doe Memorial Library, University of California, Berkeley.

Hillquit, Morris. Morris Hillquit Papers

1886 - 1944

Co-founder of the Socialist Party of America in 1900, Morris Hillquit was one of the men most influential in molding the American socialist and labour movements. Politician, attorney and author, Hillquit opposed American intervention in World War I and red-baiting in the Wilson era and worked to defend employees in labour disputes. His articles, speeches and manifestos published on microfilm are an excellent source of information on national and international issues in the labour movement from the late 19th century to World War II.

Pamphlets Collected by the House Committee on Un-American Activities

1900 - 1979

'There is nothing un-American about the Un-American Activities Committee...It is precisely the Committee's Americanism that is so troubling, in its reminder that this is not the land exclusively of Lincoln and Jefferson.'

~ Walter Goodman, The Committee, 1968

Nearly 4,000 original radical and anti-radical pamphlets collected by HUAC investigators from the 1900s to the 1970s. At the height of its activities from 1945 to 1956, the House Committee on Un-American Activities put the country's communications centers – the motion picture industry, the universities and the publishing and writing communities – under particularly intense scrutiny. In the course of these investigations HUAC staff gathered pamphlets and other printed ephemera in an effort to gauge the direction of American public opinion. These pamphlets and those from earlier and later periods, serve not only as a clue to the changing interests of one of the most controversial Congressional committees in America's history, but also as a reflection of contemporary political and social thought. An untapped primary source for political scientists and historians, the pamphlets cover a wide variety of topics – labor, communism, fascism, neo-colonialism and many more – written from a wide variety of viewpoints. While many were produced by radical groups themselves, others claim to expose communist infiltration of, for example, the CIO or the education system. Yet others are attacks on the methods and workings of HUAC itself. Accompanying some are notes saying where it was picked up or letters explaining why it was being sent or how the author's name had been discovered. This additional material is reproduced with the pamphlets providing a revealing insight into what HUAC was as subversion and the way it gathered evidence.

Papers of the Socialist Labor Party of America

1877 - 1907

A vigorous political force at the turn of the century, the largely immigrant Socialist Labor Party of America fought the abuses of America's industrial system from a Marxist platform, polling at its peak over 80,000 votes in local and state elections. This microfilm edition of the party's records, which charts in detail its changing philosophy and strategy and the influence of its most notable leaders Daniel De Leon, Hugo Vogt, Lucien Sanial and Henry Kuhn, represents a particularly rich primary research resource for both political and social historians.

Radical Pamphlet Literature: A Collection from the Tamiment Library

1817 - 1970

One of the earmarks of socialist thought and theory has been the fusion of economic and political philosophy with the concerns of the working class. Socialism in 20th century America is unique in its ability to espouse and promote its ideals in an atmosphere of relative economic and political freedom by world standards. One of the most important results of this freedom to flourish can be found in this comprehensive collection of literature. The 8,600 pamphlets included here preserve on microfilm the articulate and forceful protests of socialism against the societal ills that accompanied industrialization. Students of political science, political philosophy, the labor movement, sociology, women's studies and socialist theory will find this collection an invaluable primary source of raw material for the study of radical thought. The literature offers insight into the internal workings of many leading American socialist organizations such as the American Communist Party, the Socialist Labor Party and The League for Industrial Democracy.

In addition, a firsthand record of the personal opinions and aspirations of some of the most eminent social and political reformers of this century can be discovered and studied. The majority of the pamphlets were written between 1900 and 1945 and cover a wide spectrum of subjects, such as: the Scottsboro Case, women on socialism, trade unionism, anti-Semitism, crime, women in the work force, child labor and the McCarthy era. Most of the material is in English, but about three percent is in German, French, Italian, Russian, Spanish, Chinese, or Yiddish. Also featured are English editions of primary works on Socialism and Marxism and viewpoints of the Russian and Chinese Communist Parties. A few of the prominent authors included are Fidel Castro, Emma Goldman, Earl Browder, Nikolai Lenin, Mao Zedong (Mao Tse-tung), Upton Sinclair and Norman Thomas. The material in this important collection originates from the Tamiment Library, which traces its roots to the Rand School of Social Science - one of the first and perhaps most important worker's schools in the world. Its holdings are recognized by scholars today as one of the most authoritative sources of radical literature ever assembled. American socialism is a forceful ideology that has affected social, political and economic life in the United States. It remains a vital political force today as well, making this collection of continuing importance for in-depth research into American socialist thought.

Socialist Collections in the Tamiment Library

Different political philosophies and disagreement on how to transform theory into practice are inherent in any nation that provides a free political environment. Even within ideologies such as socialism, factions tend to develop over time that can weaken the organization and dilute its power. Socialist Collections in the Tamiment Library provides researchers in American socialism, labor, political science and history the unique opportunity to access 19 significant manuscript collections at once that contain background information on socialist organizations, factional groups and prominent socialist leaders. Included are the internal records of the Social Democratic Party, the Socialist Labor Party and the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, as well as groups not often included in traditional studies on socialism. Equally important in the collection is the significant amount of material included for researching 20th century socialist thought, particularly through the writings of intellectual leaders of the socialist movement in the United States such as Rose Pastor Stokes, Algernon Lee and Lena Morrow Lewis. Numerous research opportunities are presented to students with this collection, including: the similarities and differences in political philosophies and practices among various socialist organizations, the split between the socialists and the communists in the Furrier's Union disputes of 1933 and socialist programs such as slum clearance and public housing. Also, the complete records of the Rand School from 1901 until its closing in 1956 are available for the first time. Founded as one of the first and perhaps the most important of workers' schools, the Rand School was organized to provide adult education courses for working-class people. It was the first institution of its kind to bridge the gap between the study of economics and the emerging revolutionary aspects of the American labor movement. This collection represents an essential source for a thorough study for every aspect of American socialism – the leaders, the social and political implications, the economics – and it provides a solid background on the vital reform issues of this century. The materials within this important collection come from the Rand School's Tamiment Library – recognized as one of the most comprehensive and authoritative sources of radical literature ever assembled.

Socialist Party of America Papers

1897 - 1976

The American left has for years espoused causes that did not become “popular” until the 1950s and 1960s. Of the many socialist organizations born during the late 19th and 20th centuries and which set the stage for this Age of Protest, the Socialist Party of America was perhaps the most well-known. Within The Socialist Party of America Papers, students possess an indispensable research tool for the study of the labor movement, civil rights, anti-war activities and the history of the American left. In addition to documenting the party's activities in furthering these causes, the collection also records the party's pursuit of its goals with affiliated and sympathetic organizations such as the League for Industrial Democracy, the Southern Tenants Farmers Union, Americans for Democratic Action and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Archives of the Soviet Communist Party and Soviet State

The State Archival Service of the Russian Federation (Rosarkhiv), at Stanford University and Chadwyck-Healey concluded an agreement in April 1992 to microfilm the records and opisi (finding aids) of the Communist Party of the former Soviet Union, as well as other selected holdings of the State Archives. We are pleased to present to the library and scholarly communities the project catalogue, which lists microfilms produced by the project and made available to date. The project has three components:

- The development of an archival and scholarly exchange program to benefit Russian studies
- The preservation of approximately 25 million sheets of archival documentation on microfilm
- The distribution of the microfilm for scholarly research

Rosarkhiv is producing the microfilm with financial resources provided by the Hoover Institution. The microfilm is being published by Rosarkhiv and the Hoover Institution and distributed by Chadwyck-Healey. Rosarkhiv and the Hoover Institution have established an Editorial Board of six scholars, which has made the selection of materials for filming. Board members include three persons representing Rosarkhiv (Prof. Rudolf G. Pikhov, Prof. Nikolai N. Pokrovskii and Col. Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov) and three scholars representing the Hoover Institution (Dr Robert Conquest, Dr John Dunlop and Prof. Terence Emmons). Professor Pikhov, who is chairman of Rosarkhiv, also chairs the Editorial Board. Dr Jana Howlett, University lecturer in the Department of Slavonic Studies at Cambridge University, is the project consultant and serves as an ex officio member of the Editorial Board.

The selection of materials for filming is based on two principal criteria. First, the project is giving priority to the records of the highest policy-making organs of the Communist Party. Second, the project is filming record series in their entirety, rather than disparate files or documents selected on the basis of subject content. The project is intended to enhance access to the newly opened Russian archives as well as to preserve them for future research. Complete sets of the microfilm will be deposited with Rosarkhiv for use by scholars in Russia and at the Hoover Institution for use by scholars in the United States. In addition to this catalogue, a list of materials included in the project will be posted electronically with frequent updates on the Hoover Institution's World Wide Web server. The URL for the Hoover Institution is <http://hoover.stanford.edu/WWW/welcome.html>. The agreement also establishes an archival and scholarly exchange program.

In exchange for microfilm of the former Communist Party archives, the Hoover Institution has made a commitment to give to Rosarkhiv a microfilm copy of all its Russian archival holdings. To the extent that resources permit, microfilms of the Communist Party archives will be deposited at the U.S. Library of Congress and the Novosibirsk Regional State Archives. It is a pleasure to note that this entire undertaking has been made possible by the timely and generous financial support of several major donors. We gratefully acknowledge these donors and extend to them - on behalf of all scholars who now and in the future will benefit from their generosity - our appreciation and thanks. They are: The Margaret W. and Herbert Hoover, Jr. Foundation, The Sarah Scaife Foundation, The David and Lucile Packard Foundation, The John M. Olin Foundation, The Jaquelin Hume Foundation and The Estelle Buel Simon Trust (Alice Phillips Rose, Trustee).

Business and City Directories from Russia and the USSR

1892 - 1940

These directories offer a broad picture of Russian society in an age of dynamic social and economic change. As Russia's modernization accelerated toward the end of the 19th and beginning of the 20th centuries, social identities were in flux as peasants moved to urban areas to join the burgeoning industrial labor force; scions of the traditional nobility were selling their increasingly impoverished estates to become members of the nascent professional middle class; and government bureaucrats began filling positions in newly created government organs. The city and business directories capture these phenomena in a unique way by detailing these social and demographic changes of new Russia in a public, commercial medium.

Ves Sankt-Peterburg (All St. Petersburg), 1892-1940

For St. Petersburg, no volumes were published for 1918-1922 or for 1936-1938. The library's holdings are complete and also include the series Address Book of the City of St. Petersburg, 1892-1902. It was clearly the original on which the All Petersburgs were based. While not every person in St. Petersburg was listed, most were, including their professions. Furthermore, each volume includes an alphabetical index so one does not need to know the address in advance. Each volume lists houses according to districts and streets with names of owners and their professions. Local maps help bring the city to life for the researcher. The volumes also list all government offices and their employees. Searches for particular family lines or persons can be carried out using the last-name index, which also includes first name and patronymic.

Each volume includes a list of government officials and public institutions. As a large number of the names listed are Jewish, the directories should be of particular interest to Jewish families researching family origins.

American Association for Labor Legislation

1905 - 1943

In 1905 a small group of economists formed the American Association for Labor Legislation. The group's initial purpose was the study of labor conditions and labor legislation in the United States. By 1909, however, under the leadership of John Andrews, this "study" group took an activist turn and began actively promoting, lobbying for and effecting major changes in worker's compensation, occupational health and safety and child labor laws. Now the history of this powerful labor reform group is available for political scientists, labor law researchers, historians, social scientists and students interested in: charting the evolution of major labor legislation in the United States, tracing the growth of the labor movement and the labor lobby movement, studying reform movements and reform patterns in the early 20th century and obtaining documentation in the study of famous labor leaders. The collection contains the AALL's correspondence, organizational papers and research materials from exhaustive studies of labor problems and legislative reform, as well as pamphlets, broadsides and press releases.

The Correspondence section is the largest and most significant part of the collection - a who's-who of American labor reform in the 20th century. A sample listing of the individual and institutional correspondents includes:

- Jane Addams
- Louis D. Brandeis
- Felix Frankfurter
- Samuel Gompers
- National Child Labor Committee
- National Women's Trade Union League
- American Federation of Labor
- National Consumer's League

The legislative program of the AALL is defined and traced historically through this valuable collection of records. The AALL concerned itself with four major areas during its 36-year history: alleviation of adverse working conditions, promotion of health and safety measures, action against unemployment and social insurance. By resolving such elementary problems as safety and health conditions on the job, the AALL laid the groundwork for future progressive labor legislation. And, it directed the nation's attention to far-ranging social issues concerning the labor movement.

American Labor Unions

As labor union publications and documents attract increasing interest from researchers, there follows a need for comprehensive reference tools to facilitate their use. This microform collection compiles the widely scattered records of the labor unions in the U.S. The evolution of this body continues today, making current information as vital as historical material. This section offers both the historical perspective and the recent information necessary for labor research. These American labor union constitutions and proceedings from 1836 to the current year are a valuable reference source for students of labor law and history, labor lawyers, government officials, labor leaders and negotiators and unionized and non-unionized corporations.

The records document the inner workings of more than 250 union organizations formed in the 19th and 20th centuries and provide incomparable insights into the philosophies of union leaders of the past. Researchers will find material on: election of officers, institutional forms, official reports and resolutions, convention floor debates and statements to the public. Part 1 covers 11 industry groups (A through K, below) for the years 1836-1977 and includes the available constitutions and proceedings of 55 active and 61 inactive unions. Part 2 includes 42 active and 93 inactive unions in the 11 additional industry groups (L-V) spanning the years 1864-1976. A guide appears in each of Part 1 and 2. The industry groups are arranged as follows:

- Group C - Clothing
- Group D - Electrical and Electrical Machinery
- Group E - Public Sector-State and Local

Annual updates provide new constitutions and proceedings for the active unions. Material from the inactive unions in both parts appear from their inception to their termination. Inside this compilation of internal affairs and policies are reports by elected union officials on a variety of labor-related topics, such as legal and financial activities, regional union activities, newly established local chapters, strike mediations and organizing activities. Both historical and current perspectives are provided through the eyes of the union leaders. Their philosophies, hopes and dreams for the American laborer are recorded in the official records of the Officers' Reports section.

The organization of the Officers' Reports appears in the same industry groupings as the set of Constitutions and Proceedings. This section of American Labor Unions is also updated annually. Beginning with the 1983 Update, the Officers' Reports are included in the Constitutions and Proceedings and are no longer a separate section; further additions to the two parts appear together in combined updates. Also included are selected Supplementary Documents. These official union papers contain conference reports, joint industry and labor papers and minutes, which delineate accomplishments, interests and activities of various unions. Documents are selected from Cornell University and the U.S. Department of Labor libraries.

American Papers in the House of Lords Record Office *

1621 - 1917

For the history of the American colonies and the USA, the documents in the House of Lords Record Office, London, are an indispensable resource. Since the Jamestown settlement, material relating to North America has accumulated in the House of Lords Record Office, which serves as the record office for Parliament. The "Main Papers", i.e. the papers laid on the Table of the House of Lords have been thoroughly combed for American material for the first time and the resulting collection of material illustrates many aspects of the development of North America including immigration, settlement, trade (notably the slave trade), religion, fisheries, the railways, labour, patents etc. as well as politics and international relations. The microfilm contains, where appropriate, material relating to Canada and the West Indies as well as the 13 colonies which became the United States of America. The microfilm is accompanied by a comprehensive printed Guide consisting of a Calendar of the American Papers in the House of Lords Record Office and an Index to the microfilmed items in the Calendar. Because of its comprehensiveness, this volume clearly supersedes Andrews & Davenport, Paullin & Paxson, Crick & Alman and the other partial listings of American material in the House of Lords Record Office.

The American Sunday School Union Papers

1817 - 1915

The American Sunday school – both as a movement and an institution – had far-reaching effects on the development of our nation's social, cultural and religious values. For example, the American Sunday School Union (ASSU) provided the materials and training by which many frontier adults and children learned to read while promoting the establishment of Sunday schools throughout the nation. The American Sunday School Union Papers provides an historical archive documenting the key leaders, projects, strategies and attitudes that characterized the Sunday School movement of the 19th and 20th centuries. Founded in Philadelphia in May of 1817, the Union began as a coalition of local Protestant Sunday school groups. The Union's goals were to promote the establishment of Sunday schools and to provide local communities with libraries and materials for religious instruction. From the beginning, this was a non-denominational organization that set aside differences in doctrine to teach the masses the "cardinal truths of Christianity." This 500,000-page microfilm collection features: correspondence, reports from the network of ASSU missionaries on the social, economic, cultural and political conditions of the expanding United States, administrative records documenting the Union's internal struggles and the complete run of the Youth's Penny Gazette (1843-1860), the most important juvenile periodical published by the Union. Through these papers, researchers and students of religion, education, history and American studies can study the effects of the ASSU on American religious and cultural ideals.

Among the utopian movements that flourished during the 19th century, the Brotherhood of the New Life was one of the most successful. Founded by Thomas Lake Harris, this movement figures prominently in any study of communal living in America. This microfilm collection of papers and manuscripts relating to Harris, his mystical beliefs and his cult provides researchers in Western history, philosophy, religion, sociology and literature with a unique insight into one of the most influential leaders of utopian reform. Harris's prodigious writings have for years been a source of interest and information to literary scholars, students and others researching the political, social and religious climate during the age when utopian socialism flourished in America.

Included in this collection are the official documents of the New Life Brotherhood, publications it generated and typescripts of Harris's unpublished books. There are also documents by and about prominent people who were attracted to the movement - most notably, British journalist Laurence Oliphant. Kester, Howard A. The Howard A. Kester Papers

The birth and growth of the American labor movement often conjures images of the Northern industrial worker's plight in the factory. A significant and integral portion of organized labor's early struggles, however, took place in the fields of the rural South and Howard A. Kester was one of the earliest and most active proponents of tenant farmers' rights. The Howard A. Kester Papers documents the life and works of this man, who spearheaded many liberal causes in the South for over a half century. Students of political science, labor law and history and sociology will find this collection frees them from traditional reliance on secondary information in their research into the historical roots of the American labor movement. Although religious reform was one of Kester's early concerns as an ordained minister, his most notable achievement was in the field of labor as the founder of the powerful Southern Tenant Farmers Union.

The STFU was one of the earliest organized attempts to reshape traditional Southern attitudes on race relations, politics, religion, education and other issues. These efforts to improve the working conditions of the South's poor and oppressed provided the groundwork for the civil rights movement of the 1950s and 1960s. As these documents reflect, Kester was also active in education, serving as a teacher and dean of students at several colleges during his lifetime. This indefatigable activist also participated in many social action groups, including the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the Committee on Economic and Racial Justice. Featured in the collection are articles, reports, minutes of STFU meetings and Kester's correspondence with such prominent figures as Reinhold Niebuhr, Norman Thomas, John Nevin Sayre, Roy Wilkins, Thomas B. Cowan, Walter White and many others. The documents reveal Kester's many roles within the STFU as a keynote speaker at rallies, organizational philosopher and poet, polemicist and fund raiser and provide a wealth of information on subjects such as labor, economic reform, race relations and religious reform. An understanding of the American labor movement is vital to an understanding of American history or contemporary American society and these papers provide an important resource key to such research

Mitchell, John. The John Mitchell Papers

1885 - 1919

In the period from the end of the Civil War through the early decades of the 20th century, it became clear that the burgeoning labor movement in America was no passing phenomenon. And men like John Mitchell who became powerful forces within the various unions affected the development of life in America to its social, political and economic core. The John Mitchell Papers offers students of labor law, political science, history and social issues perspective on a man and union that were vital catalysts for labor reform. Among the topics to be analyzed are standardization of wages, the eight-hour workday, safe and sanitary working conditions and Mitchell's struggle to have the sole bargaining agent for all classes of mine workers. Mitchell rose quickly from his humble beginnings to become president of the UMW in 1898 and his zealous work brought the union out of obscurity and into the national limelight. His work and thus the papers in this important collection, extend beyond into Mitchell's involvement with the National Civic Federation and the New York State Industrial Commission, New York State Food Commission and the Women's Trade Union League.

The collection is divided into five series for ease of access and maximum research utilization:

- Series I: contains correspondence to and from Mitchell, as well as third-party correspondence dealing with organizations and causes with which he was associated. Also included are speeches and articles written by Mitchell, minutes and reports. Famous correspondents include Clarence S. Darrow, Samuel Gompers and Theodore Roosevelt. Comprising approximately 75 percent of the collection, this series records Mitchell's thoughts, plans and actions regarding the vital issues for which he struggled.
- Series II: focuses on the official minutes, union proceedings and union constitutions and conventions from 1891-1908. Also featured is a report of the special convention called to consider the famous Anthracite Coal Strike of 1902.
- Series III: has six parts; three concern the AFL and Mitchell's tenure as one of its executive officers and the other three deal with papers concerning his involvement with the various New York State commissions mentioned above.
- Series IV: contains 45 pamphlets covering the history and philosophy behind the eight-hour workday, labor ethics, improvement of miners' working conditions and the 1902 coal strike.
- Series V: features 83 photographs that preserve a pictorial history of Mitchell and the United Mine Workers Union.

Operation Dixie: The CIO Organizing Committee Papers

1946 - 1853

In 1946 the South was all but untouched by unionism, despite the firm foothold trade unions held in the North. Most Southern industrial workers lived in what were "company towns," and the companies had, in effect, a labor force at their disposal that perceived itself to be at the mercy of its employers – and thus resistant to unionization attempts. The Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) moved into this union vacuum and launched "Operation Dixie," a concerted attempt to remedy the plight of the Southern industrial worker. This outstanding microfilm collection records the CIO's bold attack on the American South for students and researchers in the areas of labor history, sociology, political science, women's studies, minorities' studies, criminal justice and more. Among the many topics open for analysis are: employer opposition and refusal to recognize contracts, labor injunctions, rash and poorly planned strikes, the smear campaign by the AFL, internal feuds within the CIO and the "Red" scare. The correspondence, administrative reports, legal materials, membership records, serials and flyers and newspaper clippings in this important labor collection offer a wealth of research materials into the CIO's attempts, successes and failures at gaining a strong-hold in the South.

Another important aspect of this collection is the material directly relating to the extensive radio and newspaper publicity used to influence Southern communities during "Operation Dixie." Journalism and media researchers will be particularly interested in comparing this newer mass media approach with unionization campaigns earlier in the 1900s. One of the collection's highlights lies in the papers of the CIO's leading "trouble shooter," Lucy Randolph Mason. Known as "Miss Lucy of the CIO," this aristocratic Virginian's fight for women's and minorities' equal rights and her work to protect labor's civil liberties stand out among the accomplishments of union giants. These papers consist of the records from four states – North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Of the 12 states involved in the Operation Dixie campaign, these four are the only ones for which state records exist. The collection is conveniently organized into eight parts:

- Part I – The North Carolina Organizing Committee Papers
- Part II – The South Carolina Organizing Committee Papers
- Part III – The Tennessee Organizing Committee Papers
- Part IV – The Virginia Organizing Committee Papers
- Part V – Lucy Randolph Mason Papers
- Part VI – Political Action Committee Papers
- Part VII – CIO Publicity Department Papers
- Part VIII – Industrial Union Councils Papers

Although "Operation Dixie" ended in 1953, its effects continue to be felt as the South becomes a major industrial influence in America. These vital records permit a unique view of one of the nation's most important labor campaigns and its permanent influence on modern history.

Pamphlets in American History

Beginning with Tom Paine's Common Sense, which altered the course of early U.S. history; pamphlets have played a crucial role in American history. Pamphlet literature has been the medium through which people have expressed their opinions and feelings on contemporary affairs. This unique microfiche collection brings to your library these historic documents of public opinion, which are generally unavailable as research sources. There are more than 15,000 titles in this collection, drawn from all periods of United States history. Pamphlets in American History also provides the cataloging necessary to integrate pamphlet literature into the mainstream of collection development activities. This collection has been carefully designed to meet the needs of historians and librarians in the areas of bibliographic control and access. Each of the five groups within the collection is accompanied by its own guide and each guide includes bibliographic citations, author title and subject indexes.

In addition, complete cataloging is available for each portion of the collection. Pamphlets in American History is organized within each group in subject-specific segments. In this way, the collection can be tailored to meet a library's collecting policies or departmental teaching strengths. The historical information contained in the pamphlets is as rich and varied as the authors. Included are biographies, campaign literature, speeches, legal decisions, trade union leaflets, personal narratives and more. (Does not duplicate materials in Pamphlets on the Civil War, 1861-1865.) The American History pamphlets collection at the State Historical Society of Wisconsin has been a major resource for this undertaking. The collection also draws upon the pamphlet resources of many other general and special collections, including: the Syracuse University Libraries; The Tamiment Library of New York University; The New-York Historical Society; The Kenneth Spencer Research Library of the University of Kansas; and the Walter Clinton Jackson Library at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Papers of the International Workingmen's Association

1868 - 1877

Founded in Europe, headed by Karl Marx and dedicated to sweeping labour reform, the International Workingmen's Association gained its American faction in 1867. Though short-lived, the American IWA furthered important reforms in women's rights, labour practices, education and currency issues, making its Papers extremely valuable for 19th century political, economic and social research. The correspondence, organizational records and conference reports reproduced in this microfilm edition of the Papers throw light not only on the formation and development of the IWA and its battles for worker's rights but also on the many factional disputes which finally tore it apart.

Records of the Children's Bureau

1912 - 1969

The publication of the microfilm edition of the Children's Bureau records is an important event for scholars of women, the family and the welfare state. Molly Ladd-Taylor American Civilization Program, Brown University. Though the Children's Bureau is one of the least well-known Federal agencies, its records provide one of the richest sources for an understanding of 20th century American society. Founded in 1912 as part of the Federal Government's new commitment to promoting individual and family welfare, the Children's Bureau played an active role in the design and administration of many important social welfare measures including the 1921 Sheppard-Towner Maternity and Infancy Act to reduce infant mortality and the campaign to reduce child labour in the 1930s. The Bureau's voluminous records, including correspondence, research reports, radio scripts, brochures, bills and laws, court hearings and speeches, represent the largest and most important collection of primary material for the study of the family and the health and well being of children in the 20th century. Not only do the documents enable researchers to trace the various stages of Federal involvement in the welfare of children and the development of family law, they also throw a fascinating light on the way welfare policies affected ordinary women.

Records of the Fair Employment Practice Committee

Proclamations of equality and decrees of non-discrimination are at best hollow documents unless enforced by the governments and courts that mandated them. One of the landmark attempts at bridging this gap between theory and practice in the area of equal employment opportunity can be studied through this collection. Nearly all records of the Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) during its five-year existence as a Federal investigatory agency is contained in this primary research source. Established in 1941 by Executive Order of Franklin D. Roosevelt to end discrimination against blacks in the defense industry, the Committee was charged to deal with any accusations of discrimination that might arise. In five years it investigated more than 14,000 complaints - 80 percent based on race, 14 percent on national origin and the remaining six percent on creed or religion. Students in African-American studies, labor history, social history, defense, economics and civil rights can access these records as a recent historical base collection for their research into contemporary labor discrimination.

Included in the more than 500,000 pages of official documents are: correspondence, case records, field reports from FEPC regional offices, minutes of FEPC meetings, internal studies, memoranda and individual workers' records. These documents are divided into two main series-Headquarters Records and Field Records. The latter series is subdivided into regional records covering the country. The FEPC dealt solely with the needs of minority workers and had specific jurisdiction over: complaints against the federal government, complaints against employers and employees' unions under contract with the federal government and complaints against employers and unions engaged in war production. Although the Committee depended on its powers of persuasion or on the cooperation of government agencies for enforcement authority, it contributed richly to promoting the cause of civil rights in the workplace. Offering as it does both statistical and human insights into labor and race relations, this collection is considered a primary research source, essential for any comprehensive study of civil liberties in America.

Smith, Gerrit. The Gerrit Smith Papers

1775 - 1924

The New York Times summed up Gerrit Smith's contributions to 19th century American history this way following his death in 1874: 'The history of the most important half century of our national life will be imperfectly written if it fails to place (Smith) in the front rank of the men whose influence was most felt in the accomplishments of its results.' Building a new nation out of a wilderness required vision, hard work and a strong sense of responsibility to future generations on the part of the early Americans. These pioneers had to create not only a stable political structure, but also a viable economic and social system - and the success of America depended on the solidity of these early foundations. The collected papers of both Peter Smith and his son, Gerrit Smith, span more than a century of important American history and provide a unique perspective on the vital issues of their eras. Both father and son made many valuable contributions to the economic and social development of America.

Students of American history, political science and sociology will discover documents on land development and land reform among other issues. While Gerrit Smith was successful in expanding his father's business empire, his consuming passion was reform. One of his earliest concerns was religion and he was involved in the work of the American Sunday School Union and the American Home Missionary Society, among other organizations. (See also The American Sunday School Union Papers, 1817-1915.) These papers also include a wealth of material on Gerrit Smith's active involvement as an abolitionist. As President of the New York State Anti-Slavery Society, he published approximately 50 essays on slavery, helped slaves escape to Canada and in some cases purchased slaves and set them free. Gerrit was also an advocate of temperance, maintaining throughout his life that alcohol was responsible for most of the crime and poverty in the world. He supported women's rights movements and responded with speeches, funds and letters to requests for help from feminists such as Lucy Stone and Susan B. Anthony. The correspondence, business and land records, writings, files and maps featured in this collection reflect the many and diverse causes he supported during his lifetime. Also included are materials collected after his death.

Southern Tenant Farmers Union Papers

1934 - 1977

In its zeal to implement New Deal farm programs, the Roosevelt Administration caused the eviction of thousands of southern sharecropper families. Thus incensed, a handful of black and white farmers met in a schoolhouse in Arkansas and formed the Southern Tenant Farmers Union (STFU). This union was to become a powerful force in American labor and would eventually be a prototype for Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers of America. The Southern Tenant Farmers Union Papers (also called "The Green Rising") encompass a multitude of issues, movements and individual histories on microform. A major acquisition for any library's social science collection, these papers can be used by scholars and researchers investigating the historical perspectives of the New Deal, farm labor, or Southern, Mexican-American and American labor history. Founded by seven black and 11 white sharecroppers on an Arkansas cotton plantation, the STFU laid the groundwork for and contributed to the creation of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee in the U.S. Senate and the Kennedy-Johnson Administration's War on Poverty. The entire history of this influential union can be traced, from its humble beginnings under the auspices of the Socialist Party, through its brief and stormy affiliation with the CIO; from its entry into the AFL up to its merger into another union in the 1960s. A unique feature of this collection is the correspondence from sharecroppers to union officials. Notes scrawled on scraps of paper or penciled on the backs of outdated calendars tell of usurious landlords, sick children and flood conditions.

U.S. Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Statistical Releases

1919 - 1976

Statistical Releases, the data issued regularly by the Federal Reserve System and the individual Federal Reserve Banks of the United States, provide a continual barometer of the nation's business and financial condition. Now, for the first time, an organized collection of these releases in their original form has been made available. Presented is the historical data contained in approximately 45 series of releases - published between 1919 and 1976 - selected for inclusion in the program by a committee of economists for the Boston and Richmond Federal Reserve Banks and the Board of Governors. The project provides access to material that will help researchers and students in the fields of banking and finance understand economic conditions generally and financial institutions in particular. The releases were chosen for their special research value and for the unique quality of the data they contain.

For the convenience of the user, series of releases pertaining to the same general subject have been filmed together. Within the broad subject groupings the collection is organized by title of release and then chronologically within the title. Where there have been changes in the title of a series, the series is listed under its original title. Bibliographic data indicating title, release number, change or reassignment of release number, years of publication and frequency of publication appear on the film at the beginning of each series of releases. A detailed guide containing subject index and full contents listing provides access to the collection and enables the user to easily locate specific releases and to monitor changes in titles and release numbers. In addition to information on financial developments, this microfilm edition contains much information pertaining to the organizational structure of the Federal Reserve System itself. By making this data in a form easily stored for library use, the material will become a standard research tool in the fields of banking, finance and credit, as well as in more general and comparative studies of economic conditions during the period covered by the releases.

Whitman, Walt. The Walt Whitman Collection from the John Rylands Library*

1880 - 1889

A century after his death, Whitman's reputation as a poet seems unassailable. During his lifetime, however, he had only a small readership. Nonetheless, a group of about thirty Whitman devotees (Whitmanites) formed in Bolton, Lancashire, England in the mid 1880s. It was led by James Wallace and John Johnston, who were in regular correspondence with the poet. This archive, the rich record of that group, consists of letters, essays, songs, poems and photographs printed for the Whitmanites. It also includes a few works printed for journals and the press. The collection documents associations with the wider British socialist culture as well as connections to such individuals as John Bruce Glasier, Edward Carpenter, Robert Blatchford and Keir Hardie. The collection also depicts Bolton and the surrounding region during a period of tumultuous change: the move from the Victorian to the Modern era. Thus, the archive is valuable not only to researchers interested in the reception of Whitman's poetry but also to those seeking information on early socialism in the late 19th century.

Women and Work

Addams, Jane. The Jane Addams Papers

1860 - 1960

'An examination of the microfilm revealed that considerable forethought was given to filming....[Project participants] should be commended for bringing together a superb collection of primary research materials and for creating a valuable guide to those materials. Scholarship concerning Addams and numerous other subjects will clearly be enhanced.'

~ Illinois Historical Journal

Jane Addams achieved international fame through her social work, reform strategies and activities in support of world peace. She was also a role model at a time when few women had entered the public arena. Students and researchers in women's studies, American history, political science, sociology and social work can now access important resource materials through this microfilm collection. The many roles of this American heroine can be studied and compared with the course of American history from the Civil War era through industrialization and the New Deal. Some of Addams's notable roles include: founder of Hull-House, founder and president of the International League for Peace and Freedom, lobbyist and lecturer on such topics as child labor, legislation, public health, unemployment relief, social insurance and women's suffrage, first woman president of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections and author of 12 books and countless journal articles.

This collection documents the rise of her popularity and its temporary decline when she was reviled as a traitor for her advocacy of peace at a time when public sentiment favored war. Only when she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1931 – four years before her death – were her anti-war actions vindicated in the minds of the general public. The Jane Addams Papers is organized into five parts:

- Correspondence – Composed primarily of letters, including telegrams and postcards. Correspondents include people such as Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Ida Tarbell and Emily Greene Balch
- Documents – Includes personal documents, educational records, diaries, calendars, Addams's writings and documents relating to her death
- Writings – Featured are manuscripts and published versions of articles, speeches and statements
- Hull-House Association Records – This section documents the history of Hull-House from its founding in 1889 through Addams's death in 1935. Included are minutes, bylaws, contracts, ledgers, clippings, scrapbooks, reports and inventories
- Clippings File – Filmed from the holdings of the Swarthmore College Peace Foundation, this section features newspaper and periodical clippings about Addams and her career, including many written after her death

The more than 120,000 pages of documents in this collection represent a primary research source and open a new chapter in any comprehensive study of Jane Addams and her remarkable influence on the era during which she lived.

Gannett, Betty. Papers of Betty Gannett

1929 - 1970

Controversial Marxist writer and teacher, Betty Gannett was a committed member of the Communist Party for over 45 years, remaining active in spite of imprisonment and frequent persecution. Her papers are a remarkable testimony to a free-thinking and courageous woman. As educational director of the California Communist Party, she lectured extensively not only on Marxism but on contemporary concerns such as the Truman Doctrine, the Cuban Missile Crisis and Vietnam. The microfilm edition of her papers reproduces many of these lectures which provide a Marxist perspective on post-war national and international events of interest both to philosophers and to political and economic historians.

The Gerritsen Collection of Women's History

'It is safe to say that no other collection in this country offers such resources for comparative studies of the feminist movement.'

~ Anne Firor Scott, Duke University

The Gerritsen Collection of Women's History provides an entire international library spanning four centuries and documenting the lives and experiences of women in the public and private arenas. Widely acclaimed as the greatest single source for the study of international women's history and the feminist movement, this collection was begun in the late 19th century by Aletta Jacobs Gerritsen. This leading feminist and the Netherlands' first woman doctor brought together an unmatched body of material from continental Europe, the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. These materials permit scholars and researchers to study what authors from various countries were writing about women during the same periods in history. The anti-feminist case is heard as well as the pro-feminist. Many other titles present a purely objective record of the condition of women during a given historical period. Considered a desideratum for any library supporting programs in women's history, social history and the history of ideas, the collection is divided into two Series: the Monograph Language Series and the Periodical Series.

Monographs

The 4,471 monographs and pamphlets in this series are available in individual language segments:

- English Monograph Titles (2,336 titles) - This segment represents perhaps the greatest single source for tracing the origins and growth of the women's suffrage and feminist movements in the English-speaking world. Featured are such materials as the writings of Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the National American Women's Suffrage publication, Ought Women to Have Votes for Members of Parliament? (1879). Such publications as Anti-Suffrage Essays by Massachusetts Women (1916), are also included.
- German Monograph Titles (929 titles) - The history of an organized women's movement is heavily documented. One biography, for example, traces the origins, problems, and successes of Germany's first national women's rights group - Allgemeiner Deutscher Frauenverein. Other interest areas include women and socialism, the history and legal status of Jewish women, and the Swiss women's movement.
- French Monograph Titles (734 titles) - Included are valuable biographies, autobiographies, histories, and more, offering research opportunities into topics such as women in the military, French law, and reforms in women's legal, civil and economic rights, and the influence of women on French literature from Gallic times through World War II.
- Additional Monographs Printed in 12 Languages (472 titles) - These monographs provide information reflecting Gerritsen's interest in amassing a library for the comparative study of the international women's movement.

Periodicals

For the years 1860-1900, which is the period covered by most of the titles in this series, there is no comparable source of literature on women. Gerritsen was scrupulous in collecting complete or nearly complete runs of the periodicals chosen; however, since there were gaps in the files, supplementary titles have been assembled. This comprehensive group of 265 titles will appeal to general, professional, and specialized audiences. Included in the large selection devoted to women's social, political, and legal rights are The Suffragist (1913-21) and The Women's Protest Against Woman Suffrage (1912-18).

Goldman, Emma. The Emma Goldman Papers

'Anarchy stands for the liberation of the human mind from the dominion of religion; the liberation of the human body from the dominion of property; liberation from the shackles and restraints of government.'

~ Emma Goldman

Emma Goldman (1869-1940) was perhaps the most famous anarchist of her day speaking out on major social issues including birth control, union organization and equality and independence for women. Dubbed 'Red Emma' by the press, she worked tirelessly, lecturing and writing, for causes linked to individual freedom. Often harassed and arrested, particularly for her opposition to World War I, she played a pivotal role in the drive to secure freedom of speech in America. For ten years the staff of the Emma Goldman Papers Project has been collecting material from public and private repositories all over the world. Now published on microfilm, The Emma Goldman Papers contain over 22,000 documents:

- letters
- essays
- speeches
- government files
- newspaper clippings

charting the life of one of the most influential and controversial women in modern American history. The letters record Goldman's life as an activist and public figure with correspondents including such important figures as V.I. Lenin, John Dewey, Bertrand Russell, George Bernard Shaw, H.G. Wells, Margaret Sanger, Havelock Ellis and Harold Laski. The government documents include surveillance files on Goldman together with court records and transcripts of her various trials. A wide-ranging resource of interest to researchers in social, legal and cultural history, peace studies, women's studies as well as modern drama, educational reform, psychology, the Russian Revolution and the Spanish civil war.

Webb, Beatrice. Diary of Beatrice Webb

1873 - 1943

'...a creative enterprise with as much internal unity of felling and structure as if it had been deliberately conceived as a large scale literary work.'

~ Norman Mackenzie

The Webb's could not have achieved all they did had they not been at the centre of British intellectual and political life. Beatrice Webb's diary contains a wealth of insights, judgments and anecdotes by someone in touch with what was happening nationally and internationally and concerned to record truthfully what she saw and thought. Never intended for publication, the diary also reveals much about the complex personality of Beatrice Webb herself. Though to understand Beatrice Webb and her world it is necessary to study the diary, only extracts have ever been published before. This microfiche edition reproduces the complete text in two forms: the original manuscript written in 57 exercise books and a later typescript. A specially-compiled index makes the diary a widely accessible research resource for the first time.

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom Papers 1915 - 1978

Formed in the shadow of the bloodiest stretch of World War I, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF) has grown to become one of the most influential and active of all international women's organizations. Its action-oriented approach to promoting and demanding world peace and freedom has created public awareness and swayed governmental policies worldwide. Now students of modern social, political, cultural and economic history as well as of women's studies can examine WILPF's successes and setbacks throughout its history. This microfilm collection of League archives and publications from 1915-1978 addresses virtually every issue and event of concern to WILPF in this century, including such topics as anti-Semitism, civil rights, pacifism, the Third World, nuclear disarmament, political prisoners and the United Nations. WILPF's influence is felt from Washington to the Soviet Union to the United Nations and it boasts national committees in an unprecedented 96 countries worldwide. Approximately half of the documents offered are in English with the remainder in German, French and other languages. Organized access to this collection is provided through its five separate series:

- Series I: International Executive Committee, 1915-1978 - This series includes the files of the International Executive Committee, which is the official governing body of the League. The correspondence, records, reports, circulars and international congress papers offer a wealth of information on the causes championed by the League.
- Series II: Individual Correspondence, 1915-1968 - Covering a wide range of subjects, the correspondence in this series is a major source of background information on the activities of individual WILPF members such as Jane Addams, Gertrude Baer and Rosika Schwimmer.
- Series III: National Sections and Other Countries, 1914-1978 - The largest series in the collection, this segment contains correspondence among the International Executive Committee in Geneva, Switzerland and various national sections. Also featured is literature from national sections, resolutions, reports, press clippings and meeting minutes. The files of each country are particularly valuable for evaluating the scope of WILPF's international activities.
- Series IV: Topics, 1918-1975 - WILPF's Geneva headquarters created a large topical file covering a variety of subjects, including anti-Semitism, disarmament, economics, education, political prisoners and more. These files represent a particularly rich research source for background on WILPF's philosophical stand on these issues.
- Series V: Printed Matter, 1915-1978 - This series contains WILPF's official newsletters dating from 1915, as well as publications and press clippings not generated by WILPF but relevant to the League's international activities and concerns.

The collection was filmed from the holdings of the University of Colorado, Boulder Library with the cooperation of WILPF international headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. Additional documents were assembled from the holdings of the Peace Collection at Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania. The WILPF Papers is considered one of the most important collections of its kind, encompassing as it does the archival records of a global organization that has worked to eliminate all barriers to peace and freedom.

Fascism*

1933 - 1945

England

From the International Transport Workers' Federation Archives held at the Modern Records Centre, University of Warwick Library. From 1934 to 1945, the ITWF devoted its energies to publishing Fascism (entitled Swastika in its first year of publication), a fortnightly periodical describing conditions in Nazi Germany and, to a lesser extent, Spain and Italy. Designed to give information about social policy and based on analyses of newspapers and periodicals of the day, as well as reports from illegal cadres, this title gives a unique insight into life under Fascist regimes, focusing in particular on the working-class movement, organized labor and the growth of trade unions.

2 reels 35mmThe Guardian

1846 - 1951

England

The Guardian was the leading newspaper of the Church of England, documenting the Church's life week by week for 105 years and has been described as "the most intelligent weekly among the churches." It was founded in 1846 by R.W. Church, later dean of St. Paul's and Frederic Rogers amongst others to uphold Tractarian principles - and to demonstrate their relevance to the best secular thought of the age. Unlike such papers as The Record (1828) or The Church Times (1863), which appealed more to those holding decidedly 'party' views, it was numbered among the best of the weeklies for the intelligentsia, providing an independent commentary on all the major contemporary theological, intellectual, political and social issues and preoccupations. It maintained high literary and scholarly standards, offering considered reviews of current theological and other publications. It is therefore an important source particularly for the Victorian and Edwardian periods and is also useful for the study of the Oxford Movement, Church and State relations, responses to Darwinian thought, the spread of Christian Socialism, the beginnings of the ecumenical movement and the challenge of war to Christian consciences, to name but a few examples. It is also a source for obituaries, especially of churchmen and by the latter years of the 19th century, of influential agnostics and other leading critics of the Church, such as John Stuart Mill and Leslie Stephen.

Report on World Affairs*

1919 - 1980

London, England

This is an entirely factual journal, whose main aim is to give an unbiased review of the affairs and policies of the nations of the world. It was founded in 1919 as a Report produced by the British Foreign Office for the Commonwealth (then Empire) Parliamentary Association. Its objective was to fulfill the C.P.A.'s requirement for a serious and totally objective source of information on current world events. Perhaps the most valuable aspect of this microfilm reprint is that for the first thirty years or so of its existence the Report on Foreign Affairs (as it was then called) was a "restricted publication" with circulation only permitted among members of the C.P.A. and its associates. It is thus a rarely found source of world history, whose importance is enhanced by its impartiality.

Notes from Ireland†

Ireland

This microfilm edition of the nationalist newspaper Notes From Ireland is a valuable research tool for all those studying the "Irish Question." Providing ample material for the study of Irish Unionism and the Anglo-Irish Community in Leinster, Munster and Connaught, Notes from Ireland also offers insights into areas such as Irish Nationalism and the impact of the Irish issue on British party politics and British public opinion. It is an exceptionally rich source of references to other printed sources and also a marvelous illustration of the art of propaganda.

"A highly respected weekly review of the business world and the stock Market, written for the private investor, the professional money person and business executives. Unlike the Wall Street Journal, it is concerned solely with investments and economics. A favorite descriptive term for its service is revelation of "special situations" for investment. No specific investment tips are given, but every page implies as much. Some of the columnists are considered the wisest in the business, actually influence stock by predictions. A basic title for medium to large libraries with any interest in business and finance." - Bill Katz, Magazines for Libraries. 3rd ed.

'Edited and written for professional accountants (not necessarily CPAs), businesspeople and managers, it is a less technical version of the CPA's Journal of Accountancy. The primary source of manuscripts are members of the sponsoring organization. Most of the articles are concerned with the problems of day-to-day activities ranging from computers and business machines to handling simple or advanced financial systems. This is a good, basic magazine for both business and specialized collections in large public libraries.'

From legislative decisions to committee resolutions, The Official Journal of the European Union (OJ) lets users study the history and expansion of the EU, as well as access the full record of the EU's dialogue with other world bodies. This daily publication allows you to: Access the official record of EU legislation, Obtain complete coverage of EU development, Find detailed information on individual EU member countries and their role within the EU and Investigate the EU's dialogue with other world bodies. As the authoritative source of EU law, the OJ is the full record of ancillary and regular reports of the EU, with a complete backfile to 1952. The ProQuest microfiche edition is the only source for the complete OJ Legislative (L) Series and Court of Justice (C) Series.

Although the OJ is published in print by the EU, as well as in electronic form in 11 languages, the print editions are limited runs and, particularly for the earlier years, can be difficult or impossible to acquire. Additionally, the electronic runs are available for only a limited time. Subscribers to the OJ microfiche edition automatically receive monthly updates, so users get the exclusive complete archive of EU policy and development. The ProQuest edition, available on compact and long-lasting silver halide microfiche, is published one month after the release of the original documents. The OJ on microfiche contains:

- Legislation (the 'L' series) - regulations, directives, decisions, recommendations and opinions
- Court of Justice (the 'C' series) - summaries of judgments from the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance;
- Statements of the Committee of the Regions and the Economic and Social Committee, competition notices and much more.
- Debates of the European Parliament - a verbatim report of the Parliament's proceedings, issued in monthly installments

In addition, OJ subscribers get the annual Directory of Community Legislation in Force, as well as monthly and annual chronological indexes. The monthly and annual indexes consist of two volumes: Volume I- Alphabetical Index and Volume II - Methodological Tables. Indexed items in the Alphabetical Index refer to the titles of the documents in the Methodological Tables.

UMI Dissertation Publishing

Soon after its founding in 1938, UMI became the publisher of record for U.S. doctoral dissertations. To this day, ProQuest fills that role for graduate students whose dissertations and masters theses have been accepted by accredited institutions throughout North America.

How UMI's Dissertation Program Works

Dissertations and theses available from ProQuest /UMI are used by researchers in all fields of study. The ProQuest /UMI dissertation product line – which consists of bibliographic data, indexing, access tools and the published documents themselves – is recognized worldwide because of its comprehensive coverage, high-quality information and rigorous editorial control.

The online ProQuest Dissertation & Theses Database (PQDT) catalogs over 2 million doctoral dissertations and master's theses, dating from the first U.S. dissertation in 1861. Thousands more are added yearly. Over one million dissertations and theses are available in full page image in microform and paper, both bound and unbound. Many are also available in digital format, for downloading over the Web. Dissertations can be located and ordered on a standing order basis or via:

- ProQuest Dissertations & Theses, which provides searching capabilities and online access to citations and abstracts for every title in the database. Titles published since 1997 are available in .PDF digital format and have citation and abstract, plus 24 page previews available. Dissertations can be purchased in print, microfiche or .pdf format.
- ProQuest Dissertation Express for both individuals and libraries. If you have a specific title in mind, Dissertation Express will let you look it up by title, author or publication number. Once you find it, you can place your order immediately via our online ordering system. Use this service when you know exactly which dissertation you need to order. Dissertations can be purchased in print, microfiche or .pdf format.
- DATRIX Direct – custom computerized search service (please see the DATRIX form enclosed in this document). This is an individualized search we perform for you based on your specific research topic.
- UMI Digital Archiving and Access Program - Ask your UMI representative about this new access and preservation service for institutions.

DATRIX DIRECT

Direct to you Successful research depends on your sources. That's why if you're preparing to start a research project, it makes sense to first find out what's been written in your area of interest. You'll not only avoid duplicating someone else's work, you'll benefit from their research. | You could search the titles of over 1.6 million dissertations and master's theses yourself—if you have the time and patience. Or you can have DATRIX Direct conduct a dissertation search for you that's exhaustive, not exhausting.

Discover sources unique to your topic

DATRIX Direct is an individualized search that gives a one-of-a-kind listing of only those dissertation citations directly relevant to your specific research topic. The result is a computer printout of exactly the bibliographic citations you need. No more and no less. It could be as many as five hundred or as few as none (informing you that your research topic is totally unexplored).

Because it's a computerized search, DATRIX Direct is comprehensive—through UMI's vast computer database of over 1.6 million dissertations and master's theses dating back to 1861. And with thousands of citations being added to the database every month, DATRIX Direct is more up-to-date than any printed source. ■ Each citation includes a title, author, degree, date, institution, subject category, and order number, as well as where the abstract can be found in UMI's monthly publication Dissertation Abstracts International or the bi monthly Masters Abstracts International.

How to order your search To organize your search, complete both sides of the DATRIX Direct Search Request form and send it to UMI at the address shown. ■

The results of your DATRIX Direct search will be sent first-class mail and should arrive within two weeks of receipt of your order. For faster service, call us toll free at 800-521-3042; outside the U.S. and Canada, call 734-761-4700, ext. 7044.
